

What is PCMH?

A Patient- Centered Medical Home Model is an approach that allows a patient to receive an effective connection with their provider. PCMH is extremely beneficial for you because it opens up opportunities for:

- Effective chronic disease management.
- Respect for the patient's values, preferences, and suppressed needs.
- Emotional support to relieve fear & anxiety.
- Information & Education.
- Cost savings, an improved quality of care, and increased preventative care.
- The ability to communicate effectively and seamlessly with patients, their families, and their caregivers.

Medical Home Core Components

Care Model Principles

- Personal Physician – Each patient has an ongoing relationship with a personal physician who provides continuous, comprehensive care and leads a care team responsible for long-term health needs, regardless of ability to pay.
- Whole Person Orientation – Your personal physician is responsible for addressing all healthcare needs, including acute, chronic, preventive, and end-of-life care, while coordinating services with other qualified professionals.
- Coordinated and Integrated Care – Your healthcare team coordinates care across the healthcare system, including specialty care, hospitals, home health, and nursing facilities, using health information technology and data systems.
- Quality and Safety – Centralized and coordinated care enhances quality outcomes and reduces the risk of errors.
- Enhanced Access to Care – Open scheduling and improved access to timely, evidence based care make it easier to receive the services you need.

Your health care team promises to:

- Partner with you to achieve your health goals
- Listen to your concerns and involve you in care decisions
- Clearly explain instructions and answer all questions
- Coordinate your care, including prescriptions, labs, and specialty services
- Ensure equal access to care, regardless of ability to pay
- Respect your cultural background and language preferences
- Provide whole-person care including chronic, preventive, and behavioral services, and medication management using evidence based care
